"What industry are you in?" - Look at adding another option. I didn't see a tech industry.

Onboarding: Initially didn't recognize a difference between the "what you already know" and when it switched to "What you want to learn". Realized I was on a different screen after seeing text at the top was different.

Dashboard button at the start on the opening app was too dark for legibility.

Lesson1: Scroll arrows on the side don't do anything

When you add something to the cart, there are no response signal that the item has been added to my cart. - I had to scroll up to the top to see that my cart had items in it. Maybe a checkout popup with a keep shopping option.

Perhaps look at the check-out page as a separate tab, so that you're not completely exited out of the app if you abandon your cart.

The "View my Application" button from the email didn't take my to anywhere specific, just to the general dashboard page.

You can't click on the badges that you've earned.

One the course is completed or finished, going back to the original screen to receive the certificate is not as fluid. Maybe needs to have the option to flow to the next screen instead of trying to find it.

Add in flow so that when a user closes or finishes the couse and there is a certificate or survey completed during that session, user is routed to it so they can view it.

It would be nice to have auto-populated instructions to apply to graduate or auto-navigated to the graduation application after completing the course.

After user completes the course make it abundantly clear what the next step is which is the alumni application at the bottom. Auto navigate and pulse.

-profile setup may be a little confusing to our typical user. Step 2 options needs more context and several of them seem similar

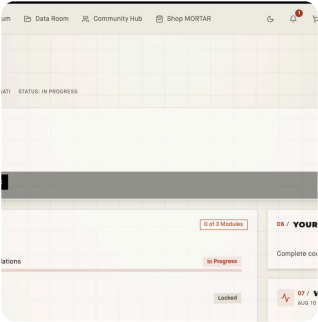

-also on profile setup. Step 6 more context needed as well

For onboarding: I feel like the specifics of what skills people want to learn vs already have should be further in the sign-up process, like filling out the profile. The only things that should be in the beginning is like industry.

Add why we are asking for the skills in a clear banner for both skills have and skills want to acquire: this is to make sure students are learning what they wish to learn and how to make the curriculum better as well as the algorithm for alumni in the alumni app.
